This class helps you to work through different areas of life that you may be wanting to change or are struggling with. Neurographic art helps to form new neural paths in the brain. This is a relatively new technique and has been used about 5 years. It was developed by a psychologist to help patients work through different areas of life. When you are finished with the process, you can use markers, crayons, or pencils to color in the areas. You are then left with your own unique piece of art.
